

FRIDAY OF THE PASSION OF THE LORD

| ALTAR            |                               | Commission                |                           |
|------------------|-------------------------------|---------------------------|---------------------------|
| ALIAK            |                               | Completely bare           |                           |
|                  |                               | Without a cross,          |                           |
|                  |                               | candles or cloths         |                           |
| TIMING           | About Three o'clock or a      |                           |                           |
|                  | later hour chosen for         |                           |                           |
|                  | pastoral reasons              |                           |                           |
| TYPE OF          | The Lord's Passion            |                           |                           |
| CELEBRATION      | consisting of:                |                           |                           |
|                  | - Liturgy of the Word         |                           |                           |
|                  | - The Adoration of            |                           |                           |
|                  | the Cross                     |                           |                           |
|                  | - Holy Communion              |                           |                           |
| VESTMENTS        |                               | Red                       |                           |
| CELEBRATION      | Procession to the altar in    | Celebrants                |                           |
|                  | silence, followed by          | Deacon, if                |                           |
|                  | reverence to the altar,       | present                   |                           |
|                  | prostration or if appropriate | prosent                   |                           |
|                  | kneeling, prayer in silence   |                           |                           |
|                  | Priest goes to the altar,     | Celebrant                 |                           |
|                  | facing the people, with       | Celebrant                 |                           |
|                  | hands extended, prays one     |                           |                           |
|                  | of the prayers, omitting the  |                           |                           |
|                  | invitation "Let us pray"      |                           |                           |
|                  | First Reading                 | Lector                    |                           |
|                  | Responsorial Psalm            | Choir                     |                           |
|                  |                               |                           |                           |
|                  | Second Reading                | LectorChoir           |                           |
|                  | Gospel Acclamation            |                           |                           |
|                  | Gospel as Passion Narrative   | Narrator Part of Christ   |                           |
|                  |                               |                           |                           |
|                  |                               | Crowd or                  |                           |
|                  |                               | speaker other than Christ |                           |
|                  |                               |                           |                           |
|                  |                               | (Recited or               |                           |
|                  | YY '1                         | sung)                     |                           |
|                  | Homily                        | Deacon/Priest             |                           |
| THE SOLEMN       | Invitation in which the 10    | Deacon and                |                           |
| INTERCESSIONS    | intentions are expressed is   | Priest                    |                           |
|                  | recited or sung followed by   |                           |                           |
|                  | prayer in silence (during     |                           |                           |
|                  | which the congregation        |                           |                           |
|                  | may kneel or remain           |                           |                           |
|                  | standing) after which the     |                           |                           |
|                  | Priest with hands extended    |                           |                           |
| 12021222         | recites or sings the prayer   |                           |                           |
| ADORATION OF THE | The Deacon or the Priest      | The Priest                | Cross covered with violet |
| CROSS            | goes to the Sacristy and      | uncovers the              | veil                      |
|                  | carries the Cross, covered    | upper part, then          | Lighted candles           |
|                  | with a violet veil, in        | the right arm             |                           |
|                  | procession to the altar.      | followed by the           |                           |
|                  |                               | entire cross              |                           |
|                  |                               | singing "Behold           |                           |

| The Priest or Deacon then places the cross for adoration by the Celebrant alone, without chasuble and shoes. The rest of the clergy, the lay ministers and shoes. The rest of the clergy, the lay ministers and the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communio, followed by the dismissal by the                               |                               |                 |                              |
|--|-------------------------------|-----------------|------------------------------|
| the congregation responds "Come let us adore."  The Priest or Deacon then places the cross for adoration by the Celebrant alone, without chasuble and shoes. The rest of the clergy, the lay ministers and the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place. The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence. Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer. The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God" Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the |                               | the wood of the |                              |
| The Priest or Deacon then places the cross for adoration by the Celebrant alone, without chasuble and shoes. The rest of the clergy, the lay ministers and the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place. The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence. Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer. The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God" Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| The Priest or Deacon then places the cross for adoration by the Celebrant alone, without chasuble and shoes. The rest of the clergy, the lay ministers and the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place. The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence. Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer. The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God" Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the          |                               | 0 0             |                              |
| The Priest or Deacon then places the cross for adoration by the Celebrant alone, without chasuble and shoes. The rest of the clergy, the lay ministers and the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| places the cross for adoration by the Celebrant alone, without chasuble and shoes. The rest of the clergy, the lay ministers and the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence. Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God" Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| adoration by the Celebrant alone, without chasuble and shoes. The rest of the clergy, the lay ministers and the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               | •               |                              |
| alone, without chasuble and shoes. The rest of the clergy, the lay ministers and the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  | 1                             |                 |                              |
| shoes. The rest of the clergy, the lay ministers and the lay ministers and the lay ministers and the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distributed to the faithful. After the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               | ·               |                              |
| clergy, the lay ministers and the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| the lay faithful approach in procession for adoration.  When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               | •               |                              |
| When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence. Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God" Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| When the adoration is completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               | chants          |                              |
| completed, a cloth is spread on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  | •                             |                 |                              |
| on the altar and a corporal and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| and the Missal is put in place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| place.  The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  | •                             |                 |                              |
| The Deacon or one of the priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 | the altar of repose and then |
| priests brings the Blessed Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence. Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer. The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God" Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  | 1                             |                 | placed on the altar.         |
| Sacrament from the place of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| of repose to the altar, while all stand in silence.  Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| all stand in silence. Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God" Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| Once the Blessed Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  | •                             |                 |                              |
| Sacrament is placed on the altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| altar, the celebrant uncovers the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| the ciborium, genuflects and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| and invites the Lord's prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| prayer.  The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| The priest then takes a particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   | and invites the Lord's        |                 |                              |
| particle, holds it slightly raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God" Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| raised over the ciborium and says, "Behold the Lamb of God"  Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| and says, "Behold the Lamb of God" Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| Lamb of God" Communion is then distributed to the faithful. After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| Communion is then distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| distributed to the faithful.  After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| After the distribution of Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  | Communion is then             | Choir leads the |                              |
| Communion, the ciborium is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  | distributed to the faithful.  | singing.        |                              |
| is taken by the priest, deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| deacon or another suitable minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament. The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| minister to a place prepared for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the   |                               |                 |                              |
| for the Blessed Sacrament.  The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| The Celebrant invites the congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| congregation for the Prayer after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| after Communion, followed by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
| by the dismissal by the  |                               |                 |                              |
|  |                               |                 |                              |
| Deacon, if present and after   | •                             |                 |                              |
|  | Deacon, if present and after  |                 |                              |
| the Prayer over the People,  |                               |                 |                              |
| joins the others in  |                               |                 |                              |
| genuflecting to the Cross  | -                             |                 |                              |
| before departing in silence.   | before departing in silence.  |                 |                              |
| The altar is stripped but the  | The altar is stripped but the |                 |                              |
| cross remains with two or  | cross remains with two or     |                 |                              |
| four candlesticks.   | four candlesticks.            |                 |                              |